

Some notes regarding the event and results

Firstly, apologies for the timing errors and download problems- the courses were changed variously at the last minute without my knowledge. The results posted here have corrected all problems created by this.

We had a dubious clock in control 105 (a battery replacement is going to be required) which caused some weird split times, but does not affect the overall run times.

My first attempt at a non-punching mass start setup crashed, and everyone instead was allocated their originally assigned individual start times- a lesson learnt for next time and all corrected manually by adjusting everyone to start at 11.00.

Team #8 was a team of only two- a senior and intermediate- so they could get a team result, they have been credited with the average junior score (age/sex corrected) for all the other teams

Congratulations to team#7, Sarah, Robin and Jim for their collective team win.

Many thanks to Tom for planning, team Craddock for all the logistics and catering and we hope you all have a continued enjoyable break and good health for the new year

And finally a note to the author- keep an eye on your running time at a score event so you don't incur a 50 point penalty!
